

one equal music

St Paul's Church in Clifton, Bristol is an open and creative worshipping community within the Church of England that aims to be truly inclusive, where all are welcomed without expectation. We maintain a diverse and strong musical tradition, both secular and sacred, led during term time by our Organ Scholar and the University of Bristol Church Choir, and have close links with the University of Bristol Music Department and a number of other choirs and instrumental groups. St Paul's has a robust history of commitment to social justice and protection of the earth.

Drawing on this identity, One Equal Music will encompass a range of projects and events centred on music and the arts, aiming to be genuinely inclusive and creating opportunities for all to benefit from, and grow through, music making. One Equal Music and St Paul's recognise the ability of music to bring people together, to increase confidence and wellbeing, to give creative expression to beliefs, emotions and life experiences, to foster talent, and to promote unity within diversity.

One Equal Music will:

- Create and support opportunities for disadvantaged and under-represented individuals and groups to access music and the arts, both in and out of the church building
- Offer a beautiful rehearsal and performance space
- Enable and foster the musical development of individuals and groups, especially those at the fragile beginnings
- Encourage expression of beliefs, emotions and experiences through music and the arts
- Support and encourage existing users of the church building

We aim to achieve this through:

- Re-establishing and growing our concert programme
- Developing a network of partner organisations and individuals
- Considering and investigating how One Equal Music can best serve its local and wider community, and then acting on this
- Establishing a fund to be used for events or sponsorship
- Continuing to nurture our existing musicians, including the University of Bristol Church Choir and Organ Scholarship

As a potential partner, we'd love to have a conversation with you about what One Equal Music might be able to offer you, or what you might be able to offer One Equal Music. We're always looking out for new ideas for projects, but also looking for expertise and help in running events, new contacts, publicity, and funds to support projects. We may be able to offer you space in our beautiful building, keen volunteers to help run events, a network of similarly-minded organisations and individuals, and more.

If you'd like to discuss One Equal Music further, please don't hesitate to get in touch, either through the person who contacted you with this information, or through our project development officer Isaac Powell, with the details below.
